About the Cover Art

A first-time entrant in VA’s creative arts competition, Benjamin Snider was motivated to compete by the opportunity to display his art. “There are very few venues in which to show your art in the community,” said Snider. “I stumbled onto this one while going to an appointment and thought I’d give it a try.”

He entered an oil-on-canvas painting called “One Morning in December” into the competition. The painting had been in competition at another local art show, but hadn’t won anything. Still, Snider said, the painting was “one of the newest ones I’d done, and the one I liked best at the time.”

The painting was inspired by what he saw driving early one morning in the mountains. The painting depicts an almost desert-like landscape with anemone-looking plants springing from the ground and lit by a soft but shining sun. Soft blue snow blankets the ground, muting the shadows and making the scene appear endless.

Snider is mainly self-taught but learned some basics of art composition by visiting the crafts department of the service club on the army base in Hoechst, Germany, where he was stationed from December 1967 until December 1970. The head of the crafts department, whom Snider fondly remembers as “Herr Erish,” gave Snider his first lessons. Snider recalls, “He was a very accomplished artist, and I would go there almost daily to watch him paint. One day he had an easel and canvas set up for me, and said, ‘Let’s see if you’ve learned anything.’”

Snider was awarded third place in VA’s creative arts competition and is one of three artists whose artwork will be featured on JRRD’s cover in 2009.

JRRD Publications

Publications Staff

Michael E. Selzer, MD, PhD, FRCP, Editor in Chief
Stacieann C. Yuhasz, PhD, Editor
Celeste T. Anderson, Visual Information Specialist
Rodney Baylor, Program Assistant
Lisa Finklea, Visual Information Specialist
Johanna L. Gribble, Technical Writer-Editor
Charlotte M. Irby, Senior Technical Writer-Editor
Nick Lancaster, Multimedia Manager
Neil McAleen, Managing Editor
James McAnany, Web Specialist

Robert L. Ruff, MD, PhD, Deputy Editor
Doré Mobley, Public Affairs Specialist
Marguerite M. Montes, Program Specialist
Arthur Parker, Program Assistant
Maryn Rosenberg, Technical Writer-Editor
Christine D. Stossel, Technical Writer-Editor
Lloyd Tinker, Peer Review Editor
Rebecca Torres, Technical Writer-Editor
Robert O. Williams, Visual Information Specialist

Call for Papers

The Journal of Rehabilitation Research and Development (JRRD) is published by the Department of Veterans Affairs Rehabilitation Research and Development Service. It provides researchers and other rehabilitation professionals the ideal venue for publishing original research papers for exposure to an unlimited global audience. JRRD is now looking for contributions to all future issues. For a list of research areas covered in JRRD, please visit <www.rehab.research.va.gov/cluster/index.html>.

Top Reasons to Publish with JRRD

High Visibility: JRRD is an established and well-respected journal widely distributed to national and international audiences in print and electronic format. Internet downloads from the JRRD Web site totaled 3.7 million in 2007 from six continents.

Accessibility and Archiving: Research is freely available to anyone with an Internet connection. No subscription or registration is required to access full text articles online. Articles are archived on JRRD’s Web site and within PubMed and many other abstract indexing companies. Legacy archival materials dating back to 1977 are available on the JRRD Web site.

No Use Restrictions: After publishing on the JRRD Web site, you are free to print copies of your article to share with colleagues or post on the Web. Dissemination of your work for educational and scientific purposes is permitted without restriction and encouraged.

Ease of Publication: Electronic submission and peer review make publishing your research simple and efficient.

Submission Instructions

Please submit manuscripts via Manuscript Central at <http://mc.manuscriptcentral.com/jrrd>. Manuscripts are continuously accepted.